Why the name INCEPTA?

The Monument, in the City of London, was built between 1671 and 1677 to commemorate the Great Fire of London.

The Monument is 61 metres high (202 feet) - the exact distance between it and the site in Pudding Lane where the fire began.

On the East face of the structure is a Latin inscription which begins with the word 'INCEPTA' this translates to 'in the beginning'.

INCEPTA 'began' on the 1st September 2010
